Dear students at the Hanns Eisler School of Music Berlin,

As musicians, all of you are engaged in intensive studies which require a great deal of time, dedication, and focus. The Hanns Eisler School of Music strives to provide you with optimal support on your career path, and this means maximizing your financial aid options. To assist you, we have prepared a financial aid guide for your use. The guide contains a separate chapter on scholarships offered directly by the Hanns Eisler School, alongside information about external funding options. We are pleased that on the following pages, the Society of Friends and Patrons and AStA once again present their forms of financial assistance. You will also find additional infotexts concerning topics such as BAföG (The Federal Education Assistance Act), student loans, and the Studienfonds, along with additional infotexts on emergency assistance.

In order to ensure that this brochure is manageable for users as well as up-to-date, we have not included information on specific application deadlines or required materials. If you wish to apply to one of the programs presented here, please inform yourself concerning details directly by visiting the relevant website or using the contact information provided here.

If you have questions concerning student financing, please feel free to make an appointment with us during office hours.

Wishing you the greatest possible success with your studies,

Anneke Kleimann and Maren Brinkhues de Valencia
(former financial aid and international office)

GREETINGS FROM THE RECTOR

Dear students,

After competing with numerous applicants from around the world, you have received one of a very small number of offers of admission from the Hanns Eisler School of Music. Congratulations!

We strive to offer you the necessary support, allowing you to complete your studies under optimal conditions, and enabling you to fully develop as artists.

Sarah Wedl-Wilson

During the current Covid 19 pandemic, one thing has become clear: for a musical artist, a successful course of studies requires optimum circumstances – not least of all when it comes to financing: when students are burdened with existential worries, it becomes impossible for them to concentrate fully on their musical development.

Our colleagues in the Financial Aid Office and the Student Administration stand ready to assist you with advice and support when dealing with all of your questions!

Wishing you the greatest success and a productive course of studies!

Sarah Wedl-Wilson

THE SOCIETY OF FRIENDS AND PATRONS OF THE HANNS EISLER SCHOOL BERLIN E.V.

The Society of Friends and Patrons is active on a voluntary basis on behalf of the students at the Hanns Eisler School of Music Berlin. We utilize donations and endowments in order to offer assistance where it is most needed.

We offer support for:

- travel cost for competitions
- participation in master classes
- the cost of instrument insurance
- instrument repairs
- students whose parents suddenly find themselves living in crisis regions
- students experiencing acute difficulties as a result of crises that affect their families
- students experiencing short-term financial shortfalls

We founded the Boris Pergamenschikow Prize for Contemporary Music, and established the student placement agency "Eisleriana." We organize master classes in collaboration with the School, and invite the Berlin public to our benefit concerts. The office of the Friends and Patrons of Hanns Eisler School is located in Room 155 in the 1st upper story at Charlottenstraße 55. You are welcome to bring your questions during office hours. During the semester, these take place regularly in Room 163, 1st upper story, Charlottenstraße 55. Office hours and application formulas can be found on the info-pillar in the lobby of Charlottenstraße 55 and in front of the office of the department management B/C, 1st upper story, Marstall Building on Schloßplatz. Office hours are also posted online at the page of the Friends and Patrons: www.hfm-berlin.de/foerdern/foerderverein/

BAFÖG, STUDENT CREDIT, AND STUDENT FUNDS

It is not always possible to cover the cost of your studies through a scholarship or through family funds. When nonmusical jobs begin to interfere with your progress, a renewed focus on your studies may become possible through student credit. The downside is that these funds must be repaid following completion of your degree. In such instances, BAFÖG is a favorable option, since according to the Federal Education Assistance Act, one half of such funding takes the form of repayment-free subsidy, and the other half is an interest-free loan. §8 of the Federal Education Assistance Act determines who is eligible for support through BAFÖG:

www.xn--bafg-7qa.de/de/-8-staatsangehoerigkeit-224.php

© Ernst Fessler

The AuslandsBAFÖG can also offer assistance if you are planning a stay abroad. Information on applying, as well as individual counseling on BAFÖG, is available from studierendenWERK Berlin at:

www.stw.berlin/finanzierung.html

Also available are other credit options designed especially for students, and which therefore have lower interest rates than regular loans. All the same, taking out a loan should always be a stopgap solution. Further information on student credit and individual counseling is available from studierendenWERK Berlin at: www.stw.berlin/beratung/themen/studienfinanzierung-im-ueberblick.html

In addition, some foundations and associations offer students interest-free loans, for example, the Kuhlmann Stiftung and the Hildegardis Verein.

Another recently established form of financing is the Studienfonds. Participants invest funds in the future of students, and receive a return on their investment. One example is Deutsche Bildung AG. Like bank credit, the Studienfonds has a commercial background, and the amount that is repaid is as a rule higher than the amount of credit received – unlike BAFÖG and scholarships, where funds must be paid back only in part, or not at all. With the Studienfonds, however, repayment is always oriented toward the borrower's available income. Such assistance is often supplemented by nonmaterial support in the form of workshops or online seminars designed to enhance key competencies.

EMERGENCY FINANCIAL ASSISTANCE

Those who unexpectedly find themselves in financial distress begin by searching desperately for short-term assistance. Temporary or time-limited grants can provide much-needed time during which the student can get reorganized and apply for more long-range financial support. In such circumstances, it is important to negotiate with institutions and enterprises concerning unpaid bills, to explain your situation, and, for example, to negotiate an extension or payment deferral.

In the event of sudden financial distress, the first point of contact at the Hanns Eisler is AstA, where you can apply for support during the most diverse financial emergencies, along with a subsidy for a semester ticket. Currently being distributed through AstA as well is Coronacare Nothilfe (Covid 19 Emergency Assistance). Depending upon the availability of funds, the Society of Friends of the Hanns Eisler School offers short-term assistance to students who turn to them in need.

studierendenWERK Berlin offers emergency financial assistance in the form of subsidies from the Notfonds (emergency fund), as well as bridge loans. Information is available from the social counseling of studierendenWERK. Responsible for the HfM is the counseling center at Franz-Mehring-Platz in Friedrichshain: www.stw.berlin/beratung.html. The social counseling of studierendenWERK will also advise you concerning government social benefits such as Wohngeld and ALG II. For particularly disadvantaged students, studierendenWERK can provide grants for the start or conclusion of studies in the amount of €1000. In genuinely acute financial emergencies, you should not hesitate to turn toward the churches.

Students wishing to work part-time who are unable to find employment related to their studies, i.e. giving music lessons, may seek a job via www.stellenwerk-berlin.de/ or via the job exchanges of the major Berlin institutions of higher learning.
